Anubis (Coyote) is the closest replica to the Great Sphinx

Figure 1. A re-drawing of the shape of the Sphinx as it would have appeared in the Old Kingdom, when it was a crouching Anubis. The exact profile and proportions of the Sphinx have been incorporated into the drawing, and the head of Anubis has been added in correct proportion to it. The re-carved head of the Sphinx with a pharaoh's face fits within the neck of what I believe to have been the original whole statue. At right is another re-drawing of the shape of the Sphinx, this time in full face view, and once again, the re-carved head of the Sphinx with a pharaoh's face fits within the neck of the original statue. (Drawings by David Sutton. Image courtesy of Robert Temple)

imgflip.com

Mary Had a Little Lamb Statue Sterling, Massachusetts

Taif, Arabia